

Jason Rice
Vice President, Operations
Jolla Ltd

Mr. Rice joined Jolla in 2012 as their Vice President of Operations and is happily living and working in Hong Kong. He brings to Jolla 16 years of experience in the mobile industry from product development to manufacturing, ultimately joining Jolla after a long career with Nokia to help challenge the status quo in the industry.

Jolla Ltd., the smartphone company from Finland, is developing mobile devices and Sailfish OS, the open mobile operating system. The Jolla smartphone, powered by Sailfish OS was introduced to the public in Finland in late-November 2013. Currently Jolla smartphones are available all over Europe, and soon in Hong Kong and India.

Jolla was born in 2011 out of the passion of its founders towards open innovation in the mobile space. Jolla is about offering a true alternative to the big players in the mobile industry. Our revolutionary Jolla smartphone running on our own distinctive mobile operating system Sailfish OS, was built on the heritage of Meego, an open source operating system formerly developed by Nokia among others.

Our aim is to be open, independent, and transparent in everything we do. DIT – doing it together is in our hearts. Our developer and fan communities are an integral part of the way we operate, how we develop things and move forward. We listen, and we take feedback. Without our community, Jolla would not exist. Currently we have 125 employees working in our offices in Helsinki and Tampere, Finland and Hong Kong.
